ETHIOPIAN WAR WITHIN WEEK IS THE PREDICTION

Based on Reports Today From The Prospective
Belligerents

SIGNAL IS EXPECTED

Italy "May Find It Necessary"
To Send Troops Over
The Border

By W. K. Reynolds
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
LONDON, England, Oct. 1.—Ethiopian war within a week was predicted in well informed circles today on the basis of reports from the prospective belligerents.

In Addis Ababa the signal for Italian offensives was expected to be the departure of the Italian Minister, followed by a hail of bombs from Mussolini's bombing planes now massed in Eritrea.

Indications at Rome were that Italian war machines would get into action, with no declaration of war and no immediate hostilities, on a large scale, to grate on Britain's ears. Italy, it was officially stated, "may find it necessary" as a result of Ethiopian mobilization, to send troops over the border line.

Meanwhile, Britain and France, having reaffirmed their determination to stand by the League of Nations Covenant in all cases of unprovoked aggression, sought more concrete guarantees of mutual support.

BY COURIER TO ASMARA, ERITREA, Sept. 30.—(Relayed via Rome)—Hello everybody!

This dispatch is being sent to you from within the barbed wire defense of the front line position in the valley of the River Maiores, which is my farthest point south in the African war. Through portholes in this high mountainous dugout I can see across the border into Abyssinia's backyard. I was going to say that even so I cannot see anything significant, but I just remembered that right out there in plain view, south of me, is a rugged pinnacle of rock rising 8,000 feet above sea level. It looks like a broken jack-knife and as mountains go, it isn't so hot because this country around here is full of plenty larger and better looking ones. But this particular one is called Scellola and at the foot of that mountain is a town bearing the name of Adowa. That name, Adowa, has sort of been figuring in the headlines the last several months because most of Americans, including myself, had forgotten that thousands of Italian soldiers met death and defeat, captivity and torture at Adowa, 39 years ago, at the hands of Ethiopian tribal warriors, outnumbering them ten to one. It was the most severe defeat the white race had ever received at the hands of the colored people in a whole century. To Italy it was a sad and bitter blow which half a million Italians remember today just as Americans remember Alamo and Custer's last stand. That is why the town of Adowa is so important in this Italo-Abyssinian controversy.

Remember, not a shot has yet been fired at Adowa or a bomb dropped, but the Italians are boys whose history contains pioneers equivalent to Daniel Crockett and Daniel Boone and Sam Houston and they are here by the tens of thousands waiting for a chance to square things.

President in California

By George R. Holmes
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
Enroute to San Diego with President Roosevelt, Oct. 1.—President Roosevelt came out of the desert country and into California today after having done considerable spadework toward his campaign for re-election next year. Over a period of five days and across more than a dozen states in rear-platform speeches and informal addresses, Mr. Roosevelt has charted and broadly outlined his position for next year.

It is this—a vigorous defense of his administration record and a challenge to his opponents to say what they would have done otherwise. In the heart of the farm belt Mr. Roosevelt not only defended the A. A. A., but promised definite continuation of its benefits to that depression-ridden area. In the Rocky Mountain country he summarized the budget situation promising no further taxation and a steadily decreasing rate of Federal expenditures. Yesterday, at Boulder Dam, he extolled governmental spending of the type that had made the dam possible, warning at the same time that private industry must eventually take up the burden of relieving unemployment in this country.

Cancels Parole

Pittsburgh, Oct. 1.—The last minute intervention of Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti today clanged the heavy gates of Western Penitentiary shut in the face of Sam Pallas, the man who blasted open the doors of the county jail to free Paul Jaworski and Paul Vashinder, almost ten years ago, just as he was to have been released on parole by the State Pardon Board. Margiotti, chairman of the Pardon Board, ordered the parole cancelled indefinitely pending an investigation. The parole for Pallas, who had served the minimum eight years of the 25 year term liberator of the leader of the notorious "flathead" gang, was unopposed by District Attorney A. T. Park, was recommended by the Board of Trustees of the Western Penitentiary and approved by the Pardon Board.

Harrisburg, Oct. 1.—The Federal government has begun to "crack down" on its allotment of relief funds to Pennsylvania, leaving the state fully $3,000,000 short of the estimated needs for October, State Relief Director Robert L. Johnson revealed today. The state's share of the Federal relief allotment for this month, Johnson said, will be $8,000,000 instead of $14,000,000 for which he asked. The $8,000,000, together with a balance of $1,000,000 on hand and a maximum of $5,000,000 in state funds, will fall short of the $17,000,000 estimated requirements for the first cold month.

CONCORD: OUR RUNNYMEDE

(New York American, September 21, 1935)

Concord, Mass., which is celebrating the three hundredth anniversary of its founding, should be made a national shrine—an American mecca.

Concord is AMERICANISM.

To stand on Concord Bridge, "where once the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard 'round the world," is to be thrilled with national pride.

At Concord the Declaration of Independence was conceived.

At Concord there was born the great American philosophy, transcendentalism—which simply means INDIVIDUAL INDEPENDENCE.

It was at Concord that there lived America's first great exponent of the doctrine of RUGGED INDIVIDUALISM, Ralph Waldo Emerson.

His house, which still stands, is the real WHITE HOUSE IN PERPETUITY of all American democratic-individualists.

These words, uttered by the Sage of Concord, have a direct application to Americans of today who see our institutions crumbling under the impact of alien-made ideas:

"An amount of money will go further if expended by each man and woman for their own wants, and in feeling that this is their all, than if expended by a great steward . . . Take away from me the feeling that I must depend upon myself, give me the least hint that I have good friends and backers there in reserve who will gladly help me, and instantly I relax my diligence."

It was at Concord also that lived Henry David Thoreau, who still felt the impact of our defiance to George III so strongly in his veins that he served a day in jail rather than pay what he considered an unjust tax.

While we are re-finding and re-learning our Constitution, let us not forget Concord, the seed of the giant oak America, the Runnymede of our liberties—which are now threatened after one hundred and sixty years by the re-born ABSOLUTISM OF GEORGE III.

NEW MARRIAGE LAWS ARE NOW IN EFFECT

It May Lessen the Number Getting Licenses in Bucks County

RUSH LAST FEW DAYS

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 1.—Pennsylvania's new three-day law pertaining to the use of marriage licenses after they have been issued by the Clerk of Orphans' Court, caused a rush over the week-end to the Bucks county marriage license bureau, where more than forty licenses were issued, bringing the total for the month of September up until noon yesterday to 224.

The new law will go into operation this morning. Now applicants for marriage licenses will not be able to use the license until three days after the date of issue. Whether the new law will cut down the number of licenses granted in Bucks county remains to be seen.

In Philadelphia on Saturday the clerks had an unusual rush due to the new law. Philadelphians applying for licenses in Doylestown often remark they did not like to stand in line for a long time looking at the cold grey walls of City Hall. That is why they have been coming to Bucks county in larger numbers during the last few years.

The same law has been in operation in New Jersey for a number of years. Marriage licenses granted over the week-end by Clerk of Orphans' Court John Thompson, of Point Pleasant, and Deputy Clerk Jacob Shelly, of Fountainville, were as follows:

Arthur E. Howell, 22, 632 Tyler Place, West New York, N. J., and Louise E. Fehl, 22, Blooming Glen.

J. Earl Rose, 29, Southampton, and Claire E. Mousley, 23, Willow Grove, Pa.

Harry Fisher Brown, 25, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Madeline Apgar, 21, Whitehouse, N. J.

Norman Lee, 33, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Olga Biletz, Newark, N. J.

Elmer W. Morris, 22, Red Bank, N. J., and Elizabeth A. Lee, 21, Avon, N. J.

Ray Cogswell, 22, and Iva Fellers, 21, Nutley, N. J.

Roland Butler, 22, Ardley, and Mary Pauaggio, 21, Glenside.

J. Edgar Nyce, 24, New Britain township, and Ruth M. Fluck, 20, Richlandtown, Pa.

Frank T. Tomlinson, 27, Edison, and Mabel Grim, 24, Doylestown.

John M. Hegenrager, 43, Sellersville, and Jennie May Crouthamel, 34, Sellersville.

Jesse Albert Batty, 42, 7019 Tulip street, Philadelphia, and Margaret Veronica Tage, 36, 4903 Rawle street, Philadelphia.

Renolds William Ziegler, 22, Croydon, and Esther Gladys Phillips, 21, Hulmeville.

Donald G. Hubbard, 24, Endicott, N. Y., and Sophie D. Roussis, 21, 3502 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia.

Fred Trout, 27, and Eva DeManovich, 25, of 1355 East Audrie street, Philadelphia.

William G. Cornwell, 26, and Emma Lou Robinson, 22, Croydon, Pa.

Alfred R. Rodeck, 24, 717 East Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia, and Emily May Tyas, 21, 523 East Lippincott St., Philadelphia.

APPROVE APPLICATION, FILTRATION PLANT GRANT

Federal Gov't to Supply 45% of Cost of Morrisville Project

SERVICES IN CHURCHES

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 1.—Word has been received here from Washington that the Federal W. P. A. department had approved of the application made by Morrisville Borough for a grant and loan of $43,636, with which to either improve the filtration plant or install a new water supply by using wells. The Federal government will provide 45 per cent. of the cost of the project as an outright grant and the balance will be a loan which will have to be paid back in the period of years. Council has not yet decided which plan will be followed in the matter of improving the water supply here and this decision will probably not be made until after a test is made to ascertain whether the quality and quantity of water which could be procured from wells would be adequate for the needs of the borough.

Plans have been drawn for the improvement of the present filtration plant and these will be ready for use provided the local officials decide it would be best to revamp the present plant. The improvements would include additional filter beds, additional clear water basins and additional settling facilities. New pumps would also be added and there would be some changes made in the pipe lines.

Council has been considering improvements to the filter plant for a number of years because the State Board of Health has insisted that the plant was not adequate to take care of the demands made on it. The improvements were not made before because of the financial burden but with the government paying 45 per cent. of the cost the borough fathers decided this would be the opportune time to have the work done.

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 1.—Harvest Home services were held Sunday in the Church of the Incarnation at both the morning and evening services. The church was decorated with grain, vegetables, fruits and flowers. The choir rendered a special program. Holy Communion was administered at eight a. m. At 10.45 o'clock there was a children's harvest service in the church with an address by the rector, the Rev. Oliver Newton. At the 11 o'clock service the Rev. Walter C. Pugh, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Yardley, preached. In the evening at 7.30 o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Atkins, rector of St. John's Church, New York, and former rector of the local Episcopal Church, preached.

The Rev. Dr. A. M. Vivian, of Philadelphia, preached in the Methodist Church in the morning in connection with the anniversary services which are being held by that church. In the evening the monthly song service, under the direction of Dr. Fred Westwood, was held.

Members of Morrisville Rotary Club attended the morning service in the Presbyterian Church when Harold DeWindt, minister of the church and an honorary member of the club, preached the sermon.

Dr. Wagner Sponsors Resolution

Harrisburg, Oct. 1.—Resolutions demanding civil service for State Health Department employees and compulsory diphtheria vaccination for school children, were expected to reach the floor today as the general session of the 85th Medical Society Convention opened. Both resolutions, together with a number of others, were voted by the house of delegates in a pre-convention session and were ordered sent to the general session floor for a vote.

Dr. J. Fred Wagner of Bristol acting for the Bucks County Medical Society, sponsored the diphtheria resolution. The civil service bill was made by the Allegheny delegation, Dr. Fred Jacobs, of Pittsburgh.

Rush Plans for New Trial

Harrisburg, Oct. 1.—Defense counsel for Senator William Clark, Chester county, rushed preparations for a new trial motion today after the solon appeared personally in Court here to renew his $1500 bail. Clark was convicted by a jury on charges of attempted extortion and malfeasance in office as a result of offers to barter his legislation influence for patronage and state insurance.

Expect Relief Rolls to Drop

Harrisburg, Oct. 1.—State Relief Director Robert L. Johnson today looked for reduction of the relief rolls by 15,924 persons during October, with the present enrollment of that number of men as juniors in the Civilian Conservation Corps. A reduction in the minimum age from 18 to 17, Johnson said, is expected to result in a marked increase in applications for C. C. C. vacancies resulting from shrinkage and discharges.

Miners Return to Work

Pittsburgh, Oct. 1.—More than 500,000 western Pennsylvania miners trooped back to work today under the new agreement recently concluded with the United Mine Workers of America in Washington. More than 350,000 others returned to work in other mines in the bituminous region. P. T. Fagan, President of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, announced the new wage agreement granted miners an average increase of 10 per cent. and had been signed by virtually all of the large operators. Workers in many of the so-called "captive" mines owned by steel companies, will remain idle for a few days while new arrangements are worked out, Fagan said.

Enrollment Is Raised For Leadership Training School

The International Leadership Training School which is to open in the Bristol Methodist Episcopal Church on Tuesday, October 8th, took a large boost in enrollment over the weekend. Reports came from the Presbyterian Church that 16 were enrolled on last Sunday; the Baptists reported 17; the Methodists 10. The other church schools of the town are also planning to send delegations, but have not yet reported the number enrolled.

A very inspiring report came from Tullytown where the pastor of the Methodist Church, 100 per cent. of the Sunday School Board, including assistant teachers, have enrolled for the school. Others will also come from Fallsington and Emille. Morrisville Methodist Church is envious of the results in Tullytown and is setting out to equal them. The groups from Newtown, Langhorne, Hulmeville and Cornwells Heights have not reported the number enrolled so far, but it is known that they are working to send a large number.

The faculty for the school is making a very strong appeal. The desire to raise the standards of our teaching and administration in Sunday School is also clearly seen in the present interest in the school. The local churches will need to get busy during the next few days if they do not wish the churches outside of Bristol to carry off the honors in attendance.

Registrations are to be reported to Wayne Fry, 323 Jefferson avenue. Other information can be secured from him or from your Sunday School superintendent or pastor.

COMMIT P. SLOVSO TO HOSPITAL FOR INSANE

Alleged to Have Slashed Wife's Throat While Visiting Here

COMMISSION ACTION

The Philadelphia man who is alleged to have slashed the throat of his wife while the pair was visiting here August 26, has been committed to the Fairview Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Waymatt, Wayne County.

The defendant, Pamel Slovso, 57, 625 N. Marshall street, Philadelphia, along with his wife, Mary Cawthorn Slovso, 32, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ludwig, 641 New Buckley street, when the alleged throat-slashing occurred.

Slovso, according to evidence at his trial before justice of the peace, James Guy, here, kissed his wife goodbye, on the morning of August 26th, and then grabbed a bread knife from the table in the Ludwig kitchen, and drew it across Mrs. Slovso's throat. The woman was taken to Harriman Hospital for treatment, and was discharged within a few days. She has apparently recovered from the wound.

Slovso was given a hearing here and held for court. He has been confined in the Doylestown jail awaiting court trial, but it is said that due to his actions in the jail the authorities were convinced that he was mentally deficient. A commission was appointed and Slovso was committed to the Fairview Hospital yesterday.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1935

WHEAT REGULATION

Again the fallacy of government interference with the natural law of supply and demand as a permanent policy has been revealed. Not enough wheat will be harvested this year to meet the home requirements. Despite an increase of 20 per cent over 1934, when the drought and the artificial restrictions combined to produce the smallest crop since 1904, the official figures place the total yield at 594,615,000 bushels. We consume between 600,000,000 and 700,000,000. So the shortage may run anywhere from a few million to 100,000,000.

To allay any apprehensions the director of the agricultural department's grain section hastens to call attention to the carry-over of 130,000,000 bushels as sufficient for all our needs. True enough, but it doesn't follow there is nothing to worry about. The stored supply was nearly 400,000,000 bushels two years ago. With the reduction already made in that excessive surplus we might easily go into next year with less than the normal carry-over.

While official concern about imports is disclaimed, a considerable quantity came in this year and will continue in the extent that shipment cost of the domestic supply from distant elevators makes competition profitable for the foreign grower. Not to be ignored is the fact that the foreign production is increasing. It was that which shut off our exports.

The situation created, where regulation plus the operation of natural causes has in two years curtailed our wheat production to 200,000,000 bushels less than our consumption, is enough to bring the questionable policy of the administration to the fore. What if the drought effects of 1934 should be repeated?

HOW ABOUT THIS, JIM?

We have waited in vain for Adjutant General "Jim" Farley, of the Constitution revision forces, to gloat over the election returns from Pennsylvania. Some weeks ago Jim, en route to Hawaii, stopped off in Salt Lake City long enough to announce that the Roosevelt dynasty would encounter no difficulty whatever in overwhelming Pennsylvania in the 1936 presidential sweepstakes.

Pennsylvania's governor, a rather silly Farley-yesser named Earle, spent weeks storming up and down and across the state ballyhooing for a new state constitution modeled on the Long dictatorship in Louisiana. The vote on the constitution would be a test of the New Deal and all its works, he and his tax-eating cohorts told the populace. The Earle scheme was turned down at the polls by more than 300,000 majority.

It isn't loyalty, however, to support the leader in a dumb scheme that will ruin him.

Under federal potato control, it is now believed much of our rural country will revert to its original wild state of golf courses.

A Californian has invented a dance for three persons. It had to come, as the CWA created a whole new class of wallflowers.

Business, which was on the downgrade during the entire NRA era, started on the upgrade as soon as the Supreme Court killed the blue hawk. But the Democrats refuse to believe the bad news and are still hoping that it will start down again.

"LOVE DENIED"

by LOUISE LONG AND ETHEL DOHERTY

SYNOPSIS

Stuart Pennington, struggling young artist, is in love with Sharlene Standing, wealthy society girl. He goes about listlessly until a letter arrives saying she is returning from her travels. Then he is filled with inspiration and his fingers seem to fly over the canvas. Stuart's model, Julie DeVore, is jealous of Sharlene. Julie finds Sharlene's letter and reads it without compunction. She asks Stuart if he will marry Sharlene and he says he could not ask her to share his poverty; besides, she isn't in love with him. But, since the day five years before, when Stuart met Sharlene, there had never been anyone else to give meaning to his life. Sharlene, now twenty-five, travels extensively, content to wait that day when she will love someone so much that she can give up her freedom gladly. Stuart is only her best friend but her home-coming was all he could think of. . . . Julie means little to him; she is just a convenient person to have around when he needs a smart, pretty face for an advertisement. One morning Sharlene phones. Stuart rushes over to the Standing estate. Never was he so glad to see anyone. But his heart sinks when Sharlene tells him she has finally met the man she loves—Kent Damerell, millionaire playboy. To Sharlene's, "But I simply will not lose you," Stuart replies, "You couldn't lose me, Sharlene." Mrs. Standing's heart aches for Stuart for she realizes more than her daughter how much the artist loves Sharlene.

CHAPTER VI

Summoning all her tact, Mrs. Standing launched abruptly into a bright account of Brooks's and Morton's preparations for their coming.

During the recital Sharlene slipped away to the telephone. When she returned her eyes looked like dewy brown pansies.

"I've just called up Kent. He's in his way out."

Stuart rose precipitately.

"No, no, you mustn't go. I promised him you'd be here to meet him."

"As you wish, Sharlene," very low.

"Do I look all right, mother? Should I change? This old thing—"

"It was good enough for Stuart," remarked her mother drily.

"Oh, well, Stuart!" She looked at him affectionately. "He's used to me—any old way. I don't have to be glamorous to him."

"But you are—glamorous—to me." He tried to keep his voice steady, but it wobbled at the end.

"Thank you, Stuart," Sharlene said, carelessly accepting the tribute, and went into the hall to look critically at herself in the mirror.

Stuart bent over Mrs. Standing.

"Is it serious, this time, Emily?"

"Yes. She's never been like this before. It's always been the other way around. She has received—" graciously enough, but you know what I mean. This time she's giving—prodigally. She's madly in love for the first time in her life."

It was cruel—but she thought it was better for the knife to cut clean and be done with it.

After a while they heard the purr of a motor which stopped suddenly, and the sound of an impatient horn came from down the hill.

"How stupid of me!" Stuart exclaimed, remembering. "I hopped out of Mr. Jingle before I got to the porte-cochere and left him standing square in the driveway."

He hurried through the house to the side entrance, followed by Sharlene.

Several yards down the driveway, a sleek limousine had halted behind Mr. Jingle who stood with gaping door insolently barring the way of his betters. The chauffeur was openly insulted, but the smartly-groomed young man who leaned from the window was grinning appreciatively. Stuart ran quickly to his car and hastily started it with a roar and a puff of black smoke to the rear. Then he drove ahead and parked at one side where the drive widened. The limousine rolled smoothly up to the door.

When Stuart came back down the driveway, Sharlene was in the young man's arms. The sun broke through the thinning fog just then and lit their figures with bright gold. She pulled away and as she introduced them, Stuart saw that Kent Damerell was an exceedingly good-looking young man—slender, and just Sharlene's height. He had an infectious smile and there was an exciting air about him. The grasp of his hand was energetic, the glance of his eyes keen and penetrating. Stuart remembered having heard that he was a great sportsman, and he looked the part.

"Sorry you had to bother to get your car out of the way, Mr. Pennington—"

"Don't dignify Mr. Jingle by calling him a 'car.' I present his apologizing him a 'car.' I wouldn't apologize himself—he just lives to affront limousines. I got him tenth hand and somewhere along the line I feel sure he had a Bolshevik owner—"

"The one who painted his wheels red," laughed Sharlene.

"I got his Shanghai gesture—from the exhaust pipe," said Kent with a grin.

They went indoors and found Mrs. Standing.

"Hello, Kent. Have you had time to get the desert washed off already?"

"Time! You should see what I've accomplished since I left you last night. I found out that Bochnig and Fairchild and Osmar are in town with their ships. It's the nucleus of an air meet! I'm going over to the factory in Glendale today and pick out a model—"

"You're not going to buy another plane!" protested Mrs. Standing.

"Anything but win!" He laughed and Sharlene laughed with him.

"But," said Stuart slowly, "you do lose sometimes, don't you?"

Kent surveyed the other man keenly and then said decisively: "Not for long; I may lose for a while, but I never give up till I win."

"And then?" asked Stuart.

"Then? Why, on with the next! One never runs out of games."

"I got his Shanghai gesture—" They all laughed. What a zest for living, Stuart thought. But it would take a lot of money to pursue every game to the end. Fortunately the man was rich, he had a fortune equal to Sharlene's. A bird of her own plumage. Surely a man of this type could never bring her to earth with a crumpled wing—the thing Stuart had feared for her bright, untrammelled spirit. They would soar together, Happy Sharlene, who led a charmed life, and who loved—frankly, joyously, completely—at last.

Julie was making herself a dress. She had gone down town, after Julie scrambled up on the table, and was standing there, mirror in hand, when Stuart opened the door.

"Probably. At any rate, I'm going to try this one out. Want to try one, too, Sharlene?"

"Rather!" she cried, her eyes sparkling. "I'm dying to get my own hands on the controls. I've been piloted too much on this trip. It's stupid! Oh, Stuart," she turned to him instinctively. "I wish you liked to fly. It's such fun to point her nose up and up to the sun and climb until the earth's a mere nothing—"

Damerell broke in, eager to recapture her attention.

"Wait till you see this special model, Sharlene. She'll climb, and she's got speed and endurance, too—"

They went on and on. All the careless, easy talk of airplanes, of spending thousands on them, of driving them recklessly through the ether—it was all beyond Stuart whose flights were never physical flights. As a matter of fact, he soared far beyond them into the mystery of men's pain and exultation, into the timelessness of suffering and the hope of peace—but his feet stayed always on the ground. He sat now, very quiet, feeling his own pain begin to manifest itself through the numbness caused by Sharlene's abrupt announcement. He did not become aware of their further conversation until he heard Kent saying emphatically:

"... and I told him it wasn't the sporting thing to do! Better never have any competitive sports if people can't play square!"

Sportsmanship. That was the keynote of the man. Stuart was glad it was so, since Sharlene had chosen him. It was a dependable quality. . . .

"Of course," Kent went on, "I don't enter games myself to lose—it never occurs to me that I'll do

Stuart had taken his joyous departure for Beverly Hills that morning, to pay the installment due on the fur coat. But first she had gone in to Robinson's Month-End-Sale, which she attended with her usual fervor, it being an ever-recurring ritual with her whether she had any money or not. There had been a wonderful bargain in black chiffon velvet, and she had used the fur-coat money to buy a yard of the exquisite fragile stuff. She had spent the remainder of the day evolving a frock.

Mr. Jingle announced his arrival at the garage near the foot of the hill in his usual flamboyant style. Instantly Julie flew to her watching post, the front window.

Stuart was a long time coming into sight. He did not dash up those stairs by the pool the way he had flown down them this morning. Could it be—?

Then his head came in sight, and Julie saw that he was very pale. She drew quickly back into the shadow of the curtain and watched him breathlessly, unashamed of her prying. He gained the crest of the hill and turned to look back at the City. The sun was already obscured by the fog rolling in again from the sea, and tangle itself in tall eucalyptus trees like mournful widows' weeds. He stared vacantly at the panorama, his arms crossed on his breast. Presently he shivered a little and with a sigh turned toward the house.

Julie's heart was thumping with growing elation. Sharlene Standing must have turned him down! Hope burst into full bloom within her again. She darted swiftly across the room, scrambled up on the table, and was standing there, mirror in hand, when Stuart opened the door.

BAIOCCHI, ST. ANN'S GLADIATOR, SCORES THIRD STRAIGHT KNOCK-OUT VICTORY IN THIRD TIME IN ROPED RING

(By T. M. Juno)

"Sammy" Baiocchi, rugged St. Ann's glove gladiator, marked up his third straight knock-out victory in as many fights last night as the outdoor amateur boxing came to a close in the St. Ann's arena, Wood street. Baiocchi's victim was Robert Grooms, East Side Club.

Baiocchi's two-fisted attack in the last part of the second round and at the opening of the final session led the referee, Walter Harpt, to stop the fight and award it to the Bristolian on a technical knockout. Grooms was floored in the first round with a right to the chin but recuperated and was swinging toe to toe with the Purple and Gold glover at the finish. At the close of the second canto, Baiocchi floored Grooms with three lefts and a right swung in machine-gun style. At the count of four, the colored battler was saved by the bell. Grooms again went to the canvas at the start of the third and this time, Referee Harpt stopped the fight.

Another knockout went to the credit of a Bristolian when Tony Puccio redeemed himself of a recent defeat by scoring a technical knockout over Edward Schwartz, unattached, in the first round. Schwartz could not cope with the fast swinging localite and before the towel came sailing into the ring had twice kissed the mat without landing a blow.

The crowd who braved the chilly weather to pack the arena was a bit disappointed in the showing of Donato Sciarra, crackerjack St. Ann's boxer. Sciarra had as his opponent, William Crawford, Kensington. Crawford carried the decision of the officials by taking the last two rounds of the fight. Sciarra landed many blows on the visitor but these were light and not damaging. The invader scored the hardest blow of the fight in the second round when a roundhouse right caught the Bristol bootblack under the heart and slowed him up for the remainder of the bout.

Fighting under the Purple and Gold colors of the St. Ann's organization, Antonio Cascardo, King's Farms, Morrisville, gave a fine imitation of "Jumping Johnny" Dundee but a wise and wiry Willard Andrews took the decision. Cascardo's jumping tactics made his stomach a fine target for the straight right of Andrews. Although he landed many times while in the act of his jumping show, Cascardo did not even dare the Wharton representative. Cascardo was staggered with a right to the jaw in the second.

Al Pierce, Wharton A. C., proved to be a fine punching-bag for Eli Wesley, national junior welterweight champion. Wesley banged his colored opponent throughout the entire three rounds of milling and hit him with rights and lefts throughout but the Wharton glover, giving a fine exhibition of how to take it and like it always came tearing in for more. Pierce was floored in the first. Several times, however, the Pierce youth stung the champion with long rights.

The spectators saw the winning streak of Willie Maher, Shackamaxon, come to a halt when he was decisively beaten by the popular red-headed youngster from the East Side Club, Harry Graber. The Shackamaxon battler who had counted three straight victories and had ruined Johnny Curran and Al Paris, St. Ann's fighters, was in bad shape as the carrot-topped East Siders pounded him with his wind-mill right. The first punch of the battle as the boys came out of their corner landed on Maher's face and the smiling warrior hit the canvas for a short count. He came back strong but could not carry the round. Maher had the best of the second session but in the third another Graber right caught Willie flush on the cheek and knocked him down half-way out of the ropes.

Bobby Hinchcliffe, Kensington, had another victory to his credit by beating James Maxwell, East Side, in three rounds. Maxwell was tired and weary at the close of the embroil and had twice taken short counts when Hinchcliffe pounded his stomach unmercifully. It was Hinchcliffe's continual body punches which carried him to the decision. Maxwell staggered the Kensington youth in the second and had his opponent half groggy at the bell.

A volley of lefts and rights by that East Side buzz-saw, James Generale, in the final session gave him the verdict over Herbert Spencer, Wharton. In the early stages of the fight, Spencer landed several tantalizing lefts and twice jarred the East Side miltman. But Jimmy always staged his first finish and gained last points. In the second, Generale kissed the canvas when caught with a short hook. It was the two-fisted finish of the East Side glover which had Spencer staggering at the end that gave him the decision.

There was very little to the second bout of the evening which brought together George Domanov and Daniel McCloskey, two 160-pounders. Domanov was floored at the bell of the first round but began the second half-dazed and when McCloskey caught him with that vicious right, his seconds tossed in the towel.

The only unpopular decision of the evening gave George Bohenberger the nod over Thomas Brown, Shackamaxon. This fight was close and exciting with the Shackamaxon boy landing the most telling blows of the battle. Bohenberger was twice staggered in the final session with long rights of Brown.

The officials for the bouts were: Referee, Walter Harpt; judges, Ford Lilly and James McGinley; timer, Thomas O'Hanlon; announcer, Patsey Moffo; physician, Dr. Joseph Levy; and deputy inspector, Joe Brown.
